

In the same week that the Arkansas Public Service Commission marks up the assessments of natural gas companies to double or triple their former valuation a fight breaks out in the Pulaski County Equalization Board because some of the members don't want to disturb the generation-old assessment figures of business property in downtown Little Rock.

Surely here is a test of the fundamental honesty and future success of the assessment reform program throughout Arkansas.

Marking up the gas company properties to 50 per cent or more of their market value is a typical political gesture—and just as typical of the politicians is the disclosure that they are trying to lay off of the important property-holding citizens of Little Rock.

The people who make the gas companies are for the most part little fellows, the proverbial payers of utility bills—but the corporations, whatever their true source of income, make fine targets for the politicians to shoot at.

But politicians don't like to offend important individuals.

Therefore we are confronted by the oldest and most stupid situation known to democratic government—a proposition to make the utilities pay taxes on a high assessing level while other property pays on a lower level.

It never has worked in the past, and it won't work today. The utilities will simply go into court and have their assessments equalized with those of other property-owners. The raid on the utilities will fail—and if downtown assessments in Little Rock aren't jacked up then the tax reform program will collapse in the very heart of the state, its capital city.

Hope and other Arkansas cities have revised their downtown property assessments, and this year residential property is being brought into line. Honest men trying to do an honest job finding the money for schools and other agencies of government have little patience with the state politicians and Little Rock landlords who are attempting to palm off this old story about making the other guy foot the tax bill.

It never has worked. It won't work this time. But this time the people are wise to what's going on. If the state and school financial crisis continues you can be sure that the question to be asked at every crossroads in Arkansas will be: What did they do about those downtown Little Rock assessments?

Third Appeal of Maxwell Heads Court Docket

By WILLIAM W. HUGHES

Little Rock, Sept. 20 — (UP) — A full docket of top-drawer cases that affect the public interest awaits the Arkansas Supreme court that opens its 1951-52 season Oct. 1.

Handling the cases which the judges must consider in the next nine months will be:

1. A test case on the 1951 legislative act which amended the 1950 statewide stock district law approved by the voters.

2. An appeal by a group of city attorneys from a Pulaski circuit court decision which approved a $3,600,000 annual rate increase granted the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. by the public service commission.

3. An original jurisdiction case filed by two taxpayers which asks that the three-man board of reapportionment be forced to add another state senator to the Pulaski county delegation in the legislature.

The third appeal of a convicted Negro, Herman Maxwell, of Hope, who has been twice convicted and granted two new trials for the alleged criminal assault of a white woman.

Not filed yet, but expected soon is a test case of the 1951 state purchasing act. Administration foes are seeking to refer the act to an Agent Carl Parker has a force of investigators seeking to show that the referral petitions are void.

Parker has said he is ready to file an original suit in the Supreme court to throw out the petitions.

The stock law case is up for early consideration by the high court. It is one of the 15 cases ready for submission during the first two weeks of the new session.

An act authored by State Rep. Carroll Hollenworth of Bradley county amends the state act of 1950 which prohibited livestock from running at large on all public roads. Under the legislative amendment, it initiated act was made to apply only to hard-surfaced roads.

The test case involves the circuit court conviction of Jimmy Jacks of Pulaski county whose livestock allegedly was found on a hard-surfaced road. Jack's attorneys are seeking to prove that the amendment makes the act applicable only to hard surfaced roads which are part of the primary road system.

Final briefs have not yet been filed in the Southwestern Bell Telephone case. The Pulaski Circuit court recently upheld a PSC decision granting the company a $3,600,000 annual rate increase.

A group of city attorneys, led by O. D. Longstrech of Little Rock, is appealing that decision.

Clay E. Smith and Floyd H. Fulkerson, two taxpayers, have filed an original suit in the Supreme court demanding that the three-man state board of reapportionment increase the Pulaski county senatorial delegation in the state legislature from two to three. The board is made up of Gov. Sid McMath, Secretary of State C. G. Hall and Attorney General El. Murry.

Murry and Hall voted against a third senator for Pulaski county, of such an addition.

The case of Maxwell, the convicted rapist, heads the criminal docket now ready for consideration. Maxwell was convicted of assaulting a white farmwife near Hope in Hempstead county. He was convicted twice and given new trials. A third trial resulted again in his conviction and the current appeal is the result.

Ignored by U. S. Packers, Army to Buy Elsewhere

Washington, Sept. 20 — (AP) — The army said today it got offers of only 100,000 pounds of beef in response to its request for bids on 13,000,000 pounds.

Only two of 212 packers solicited for bids made offers.

This seemed to make certain that the army now would turn to overseas markets to get the boneless or carcass beef needs for supplying the European command.

The army announced yesterday that if domestic packers failed to provide the needed amount it would request authority from Army Secretary Pace to buy overseas.

The packers have given government price controls and a shortage of high quality beef as reasons for refusing to submit bids.

Requests for bids were put out by the Chicago Quartermaster office and results were sent on to the Pentagon during the night. An army spokesman this morning told reporters:

"The army requested 212 packers to submit bids on 13,000,000 pounds of beef meat needed. Of the 212 packers solicited, 13 replied to the army's request."

"Of this number, only two made offers to supply beef. These two offered a total of 100,000 pounds."

"These were Kingdon Co. of Indianapolis, which offered 100,000 pounds, and Dugdale Packing Co. of St. Joseph, Mo., which offered 100,000 pounds."

Most of the large packers, a Chicago area marketing officer said, told him they could not bid on the "urgently needed" beef because they cannot buy enough cattle to slaughter without suffering losses.

The army in Washington said if the request for the beef is not met, the quartermaster general will seek authority from Army Secretary Pace to buy beef "off shore" — foreign countries.

If foreign meat is purchased, the army said it will be used to meet requirements of American forces in Europe, relieving a drain on West Coast supply sources. The West Coast sources normally ship to the Far East and to military installations in the United States.

The statement said the army must have "immediate assurance that supplies will become available to the army not later than Nov. 10. If such supplies are not available, menus as messes in the United States will have to be adjusted."

Swift & Co. and Armour & Co., two of the nation's largest packers, were among firms which advised army quartermaster market centers they could not bid on the beef order.

Swift said the present market prices for grade A beef cattle needed to produce the army beef were six to eight per cent over existing levels imposed by the office of price stabilization. The company said its plants could not buy at these prices and sell at wholesale.

Reds Desire to Revive Talks Immediately

Tokyo, Sept. 20 — (AP) — The Communist high command reversed itself today and suggested that Korean cease-fire talks be resumed immediately in Knessung.

The Reds broke off the talks 28 days ago. They charged then that an Allied plane bombed and strafed the neutral Kaesong area Aug. 22 in an attempt to influence Communist truce delegates. The Allied command called the charged fraudulent and faked.

Nevertheless the Reds have demanded that the Allies admit responsibility for a string of alleged neutral zone violations before the truce talks could be resumed.

"They proposed today only that a 'suitable organization' be set up to guarantee the neutrality of Kaesong, Korea, c

But Matthew B. Ridgway made no immediate comment.

But a release from the supreme commander's 1. headquarters said: "There is reason for hope that the latest Communist reversal in policy and agreement to renew the peace talks may bring some sort of a cease-fire in Korea."

It cautioned, however, that "it is a bone that must be tempered by the realization that a renewal of the talks does not mean necessarily that previous difficulties will suddenly iron themselves out."

Chinese Gen. Peng Teh-huai and North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung proposed:

1—"That a liaison officer on both sides meet to fix the time for reopening the meetings.

2—"That at the first session after the conferences resume delegates discuss a plan 'to establish a suitable organization' for guaranteeing the neutrality of Kaesong and settling differences over previously charge violations."

The United Nations command has admitted the validity of only two alleged violations.

Ridgway's headquarters said an Allied plane strafed Kaesong on August 22, but that the plane was not a bomber and that the plane was not a bomber and that the plane was not a bomber.

The Red leaders said they were willing to consider reopening the talks because of the "responsible attitude" the Allied have taken regarding the admitted violations.

Murry Talks of Running in Florida

Ocala, Sept. 19. (UPI) — State Attorney General Ike Murry called down the first plank in his platform as a prospective candidate for governor in a speech here today.

Murry called for a reorganization of the state highway commission "to take it out of politics."

Reporters immediately asked the attorney general if his speech was an indication that he would run for governor.

Murry replied that he was not announcing his candidacy for the chief executive's job.

"But if I do run for governor, I want the people to know before hand just where I stand on all of the important issues," Murry said.

He called for a reorganization of the highway commission either through an initiative act or through a proposed constitutional amendment which already is on the ballot for the 1952 general elections.

"I do not believe the highway department can function efficiently so long as it is controlled by a commission which is dominated by the governor's office," Murry said.

He called for a commission where the members would serve staggered terms so that no one governor could control its actions by appointing all of the members.

Such a commission, Murry said, would be free of political interference.

"I have been told by acute political observers that no governor would voluntarily relinquish the extensive patronage and other advantages attached to the control of the highway program," Murry said.

"These also say no candidate can be successful in Arkansas who would advocate such a program."

He said that he does not agree with these observations.

The attorney general also made another statement that might be significant in assessing his future intentions.

"I believe the electors of this state prefer to vote for the candidate best qualified to serve rather than the candidate who is most judicious in making promises," he said.

"I believe the voter prefers to be relieved of the burden of guessing right in a gubernatorial campaign in order that his community will have its rightful share of highway construction and maintenance."

But Senator George (D-Ga.) in his opening statement on the bill late yesterday, said Nov. 1 was the earliest possible effective date for the increases in these two taxes.

George said when the bill becomes law the federal government will be collecting about $67,000,000, 000 a year in taxes—or $21,000,000, 000 more than the World War Two peak.

According to congressional staff experts, the senate finance committee's bill will raise about $5,800,000,000 annually in new revenue. George puts the figure higher—close to $6,000,000,000.

Senate Told Tax Increase to Fall Short

Washington, Sept. 20. (AP)—President Truman told the senate today its tax increase bill would fall far short of balancing the budget and renewing his request for a $10,000,000,000 tax hike.

Mr. Truman sent a letter to vice president Alben Barkley which was read to the senate as it began its first full day of debate on the measure.

The bill, drafted by the senate finance committee, would yield an estimated $5,500,000,000 a year in new revenue. A house-passed bill would raise an estimated $7,200,000,000.

Mr. Truman said the federal government already is heavily in the red in this fiscal year, and that personal and corporate incomes are running at such high rates they could stand stiffer tax boosts than the senate bill proposes.

The President was highly critical of what he said were loopholes put into the bill by the finance committee and other provisions "for the benefit of special groups."

There was no immediate reaction in the senate to the letter. Several members of the finance committee, including Chairman George (D-Ga.), were present but none rose to make any reference to Mr. Truman's criticism.

The senate had met two hours early to speed debate on the tax bill which is already three months late by administration standards.

It is the third big tax hike to come before congress since the Korean war began 15 months ago.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder proposed to the house ways and means committee last spring that the boosts on personal income taxes and excises go into effect by July 1.

But Senator George (D-Ga.) in his opening statement on the bill late yesterday, said Nov. 1 was the earliest possible effective date for the increases in these two taxes.

George said when the bill becomes law the federal government will be collecting about $67,000,000, 000 a year in taxes—or $21,000,000, 000 more than the World War Two peak.

According to congressional staff experts, the senate finance committee's bill will raise about $5,800,000,000 annually in new revenue. George puts the figure higher—close to $6,000,000,000.

One Man Made Effort to Live

Tokyo, Sept. 20. (AP)—At least one of the 14 men aboard a U. S. B-29 superfortress, which crashed in the Sea of Japan early Wednesday, was able to make an effort to survive, air force headquarters said.

A parachute, a survival kit and a deflated rubber life raft were found by a crash boat and presumably came from the crashed plane.

No trace of survivors has been found but an intensive search is continuing. The third air rescue squadron has asked the navy to send divers to examine the fuselage of the B-29. The wing extends above the water.

The B-29 crashed in the Sea of Japan early Wednesday. The plane was on a mission to drop atomic bombs on Japan.

DOROTHY DIX

Suspicious Wife

Dear Miss Dix: I am 21, married and very much in love with my husband. He is very good to me but in spite of everything I fear I am losing my faith in him. I am expecting a child in three months and my husband has been going out on pay nights with other men from the office, drinking. The other night he left the house to cash his check and have a few drinks. I waited for a while, then decided to go for a ride, picking him up on the way. When I got to the tavern, I looked in and saw him with his arm around a girl. I returned home, and when he arrived I asked him about the girl and he said it was someone he had known long ago, and she didn't mean a thing to him. I haven't had a moment's peace since. He assures me it won't happen again, but I am torn with jealousy. Should I believe in his good intentions and let the incident pass, acting as though it had never occurred?

CELESTE
Answer: For the sake of any happiness you expect to get from your marriage, you'd better get the whole affair off your mind and follow your own suggestions for future conduct. Look at it this way: You're nothing to lose by believing your husband and relying on his assurance that this girl meant nothing to him. On the other hand the sure way to get him out of the house every night is to keep nagging.

Don't Brood About It
Brooding isn't going to do either you or your baby any good. Stop it! Of course in your physical condition you are bound to magnify all troubles, but you must adopt a more sensible mental attitude or spoil completely what should be for both you and your husband a very happy period.

If you are jealous or suspicious by nature, these faults must—and can be—overcome. You may be left alone many evenings with a new baby. Don't turn each such occasion into a session of worry and doubt over hubby's whereabouts or activities. Suspicion is a growth that spreads and multiplies.

like a weed. Kill the first faint outcroppings, and the scourge is conquered. Foster it with further doubts and it kills every bit of contentedly nurtured love.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have two daughters, one single and one married. Recently I remarked to the single one that I had only been in the other daughter's home three times in a year for dinner. She answered that was all I could expect. I guess I'm a little hunk, as I always did so much for the girls. Now all they want is for me to sew for them and never visit for a meal. I guess we older mothers just must take a back seat, give and do, expect nothing and we won't be disappointed.

Answer: A mother should be a welcome guest in a married daughter's home at all times, provided, of course, she isn't a troublemaker. She should be doubly welcome when she does the family sewing, as you do, and helps with the baby tending. A girl who would have any other thought is callous. Your daughters don't realize what an asset they have in a mother who can and will do the odd jobs that accumulate in a family. There is a rare privilege, and one that should certainly be recognized by giving you a warmer welcome to their homes.

Dear Miss Dix: We are three girls who work in the same office. We are constantly being threatened by a jealous co-worker for talking with her ex-boy friend who also works with us. There is no romance between them now, and to us he is just a friend. Should we stop talking to him or ignore her threats?

THREE PUZZLED GIRLS
Answer: Your jealous friend sounds like a complete idiot and certainly should be ignored. If her threats become too annoying, take the matter up with one of your superiors.

Police Seek to Solve Mystery

Paris, Sept. 19 —(AP)—Police had a 50 per cent score today in the mystery of the hotel manager, murdered and sealed in a cellar.

They have found two of the four persons missing in the case, one dead and one alive.

Yesterday, police discovered the dead woman's niece, Denise Le Roy, 12, alive at a country home in Normandy.

Sunday, they found the body of Madame Jeanne Perron, 52, sealed in the wall of the murky little Hotel Du Theatre near the Eiffel tower.

THE STORY: John Clayton, ex-Confederate colonel, goes West after the Civil War. At Fort Kearney he witnesses the inefficiency of the Army in marching troops onto the scene where negotiations for a treaty with Indians are in progress.

IV

BY the middle of July, Carrington had garrisoned Fort Reno, just south of the Powder. Then, with attention to orders but little to sanity, he began building his new post, Fort Phil Kearney, 70 miles further north.

I had long since parted company with Ed Geary, he going on up the Bozeman Trail with our train, staying on as a civil scout and meat hunter for Carrington's command at Fort Kearney.

I was lounging in quarters, having been in the field the entire night previous, scouting a rumor of a giant war camp on the Tongue, when word came the captain wanted to see me.

I was immediately apprehensive. Fetterman was the one who had told Geary, "With 50 good men I could ride through the whole Sioux Nation."

Earlier in the same day, one of the young officers had shown me a notebook kept by a private of his company, in which the latter had filed a list of game taken in the vicinity of the fort. Numbered carefully among the elk, bear, antelope, and buffalo were "five common Indians."

It was with these thoughts I reported to Captain Fetterman, quickly learning my fears had been conservative.

"Clayton, we've got a wood train stuck over on the Tongue. Ambushed and surrounded. Care to scout the action for me?"

You're a guy blade, I thought to myself. Not every man would be so delighted at the prospect of having his brains pured by a tomahawk. Aloud, I said, "I'll go. How many men are we taking?"

This was not presumptuous of me. I was a civilian scout. It was understood I had the right to refuse service, to question tactics. Of course such an attitude persevered in was not conducive to long employment.

"Forty," he went on, in reply to my question. "Colonel Carrington insisted. 'Taking no chances, you know.'"

TWO hours hard riding brought us within sound of firing. Lieutenant Wards and I went in ahead, scouting. We brought Fetterman back what appeared to be good news. The train, which I now knew had a guard of 20 soldiers, was in excellent defensive position, the five wagons half-enclosed against an overhanging bluff, 200 yards from the river on their front. There was a steady rifle fire coming from the wagons. Twelve men were visible, on their feet and fighting.

On Fetterman's command we went cowboying down into the river valley, our troops yelling, brandishing sabers, recklessly discharging side arms.

Our appearance heartened the defenders of the wood wagons and apparently demoralized the hostiles, for with exulting whoops they scattered off to the valley. In the van of their gallant pursuers galloped the eager Hussain, fat from six months of Army oats, while in his rocking saddle went Civilian Scout J. B. Clayton, for that moment and action quite as fat as his mount, notably in certain regions bounded by the hair and ears.

Past the wagons we went, pell-mell, on up the valley after the "cowardly redskins." No sooner had the last of our troops cleared rifle-range of the wagons than the hills on both sides of the shallow Tongue disgorged such a lively number of interested friends and relatives of our intended victims as shortly to put in our rear, and between us and the wagons, no less than 100 Sioux and Cheyennes. It was a beautiful trap.

Fetterman actually gave a shout of pleasure when he saw our predicament. Splitting his command, he sent Lieutenant Wards and 30 men in a pistol-charge back at the Indians in our rear. Then, with a boyish yell he led the remaining eight troopers on a wild dash toward the 150 savages above us.

The ranks in front of us opened up like a great scarlet maw, swallowing Fetterman and his eight troopers whole. By some miracle I won through, breaking out behind the seething mass of warriors into the clear. By the time I could check Hussain, I beheld an equal miracle. Fetterman was still mounted, though the length of his stature at that minute could have been counted in seconds on the fingers of one hand. The futures of his eight men were behind them.

THE Indians, checked momentarily by my unexpected return and kept from slaughtering us with arrow-fire by the fact they couldn't shoot without hitting each other, now swept forward to finish us off with lances. As they came, I died.

At such close quarters the effect was devastating. A path literally did open in the direction of my fire, the Indians pulling their charging ponies aside to get out of the way.

Behind us the Indians reformed, streaming after us in a wave. Their bows were busy now, the air around us was hissing with arrows.

Before us lay no apparent escape. I had thought to try and join the survivors of the 30 troopers, should there be any, but all the field not one showed.

Like between us and the wagons lay a sea of red warriors. At least 100 rode at us from the front, the remaining scores closing in on the wagons for the kill. I can remember, an instant before we hit them, hearing a great cheer go up from the wagons. Our men had seen us.

A foolish phrase flashed through my mind, "Well, Eyes-and-Beak-of-the-Hawk, you will never have a better audience for your Magic-with-the-little-guns performance."

Then the pistols were in my hands. (To Be Continued)

Public Hearing in Jail Beatings

North Little Rock, Sept. 20 —(AP)—A public hearing on the suspension of a North Little Rock police officer for allegedly mistreating a prisoner has been set for Sept. 27.

The civil service commission scheduled the hearing at the request of the suspended officer, F. L. Buddy Morgan.

Morgan was suspended last week by Police Chief Jack Pyle following charges that R. L. Blendon, 51, of Jacksonville, was beaten while confined in jail here.

Blendon was arrested by State Trooper William V. Stane on a charge of driving while drunk and driving without a driver's license. Stane has been discharged by state Police Director Herman Lindsey for his part in the alleged beating.

Horrid Weather Hits Arizona
Chicago, Sept. 19 — (AP)—More pleasant weather was on tap for most of the country today. It was of the hot side in the far Southwest with temperatures yesterday hitting 110 at Yuma, Ariz. They were in the 70's over the eastern half of the nation.

Light showers were reported early today in the central plains and central Rockies and there were a few showers in Florida. But elsewhere it was fair to partly cloudy.
